Velma and Vivian Picton
"Aunt Hon & Pumma"

Grace Vivian Picton (Hon) and Velma Picton (Pumma) were David Picton's only sisters. They never married and lived together their whole lives in the Picton family home in Rockport. The Picton daughters have wonderful memories of being entertained by Hon and Pumma during their long summer visits. Pumma died in 1976. Hon lived to celebrate her 100th birthday in 1993, plus almost one year more, dying in 1994.

Playhouse
Houston

The Playhouse was given to the Picton girls by Mr. Will Hogg, business associate and great friend of Papa Pic. He had it built one summer while the girls were in Rockport. Besides being a wonderful place to play, it later filled a practical need, too. While the family was adding a new kitchen and sleeping porch on to the house, all the family's meals were cooked in the Playhouse kitchen, which had a working stove, oven and sink. The little house had a living room with a fireplace and piano, breakfast room and kitchen.

All the Picton family have memories of both Nellie and Phelps. Nellie was the best cook imaginable and Phelps took care of all the household chores from silver polishing to overseeing the lawn crews. Phelps was the pastor of his church, as well.

Helpful Hints for Cooking Outdoors From Uncle Doug Craig

Roasts and Large Pieces of Meat:

Place the meat on the hot end of the pit over the flaming coals, and sear the piece on each side, front and rear. After the roast or meat has a good crust, move the meat to the far end of the pit, away from the direct fire, and let the heat and smoke do the cooking.

Lamb Chops and Ground Beef:

Allow the fire in the pit to cook down because the fat on the chops and in the ground beef will “flame” once the meat is placed over the charcoal. I like to start lamb chops, fat side down over the fire to let the meat get started, then shut the lid and let the chops cook slowly. The same is true for ground beef.

Chicken:

Place the chickens on the grill away from the hot fire and use wet wood chips to produce the smoke necessary for cooking chickens outdoors on the grill. Normal cooking time is 2-3 hours.

Fish and Shrimp:

Call Doug Jr. or David Craig for the “how to” on fish and shrimp.

Be sure to keep our telephone number handy should you need assistance in the “Eating Department.”

MARTHA ANN JOHNNIE LEE CHANCE GRACE WISE

Martha Ann Hines, Johnnie Lee Chance and Grace Wise, embarking on a crabbing expedition in Rockport

There are many shallow flats along the shore in Rockport and the method for crabbing is to wade through the knee-high water scooping up crabs with nets on long poles. A large galvanized tub is tied to someone's waist with a string and dragged along to hold the captured crabs. You can tell this group is just setting out because returning crabbers are worn out and covered with mud!
